

'Process Modeling in the Payroll Department' is WorkForce Software's Latest On-demand Webinar in its Learning Series

Livonia, Mich., August 22, 2007 – WorkForce Software, Inc., a leader in workforce management software solutions, is pleased to announce a free webinar for payroll and human resources professionals. During the month of August, WorkForce Software is hosting an on-demand webinar on “Process Modeling in the Payroll Department,” presented by Mr. Roger Smith, CPP and payroll consultant. This webinar is ideal for all payroll and HR professionals who want to improve processes to make an impact at their organization.

Mr. Smith has an extensive background in the payroll industry, recently retired from EDS, and is a frequent speaker for the American Payroll Association. In this webinar, he discusses how process modeling can help you meet your professional objectives, including today's common theme for global economy – cut costs without giving up quality or results.

Process modeling communicates an understanding of current practices and facilitates process improvement. Often times, there are initiating factors or events that require process improvement, such as in the payroll area. It could be non-compliance of labor laws or union contracts, or it could be that the employer took notice in current payroll processing costs. Both of these examples are important, and even critical, to an employer. Mr. Smith provides a foundation to help you get started.

When: On-demand to meet your schedule

Where: At your desk

Who Should Attend: Professionals in payroll, human resources, IT, and finance

“This is an exciting webinar to add to our ‘Learning Series’ this year,” said CEO & President Kevin Choksi, WorkForce Software. “Process modeling is an effective method to see where you can improve the way you do business at your organization, and with payroll being a critical component of any organization this is an ideal learning session for payroll and HR professionals.”
